Crane Freight Services Group Selects Aljex

Ground Logistics Company Builds Efficiency from the Ground Up

Middlesex, N.J. - August 31, 2009 - Ground logistics and transportation services provider Crane Cartage (CFS) has selected Aljex as its transportation management technology partner. All of the CFS operations groups will use Aljex software in its North American truckload, dedicated fleet, ground logistics, and commercial cartage operations.

Aljex Software Inc. is the industry-leading provider of hosted management software for freight brokers, 3PLs, and other transportation providers.

CFS is the single-source provider of ground transportation and logistics services launched this year by logistics entrepreneur James Crane and a select management team. Crane established a reputation for transportation quality, service, and innovation with EGL, Inc., the logistics provider he founded in 1984 and sold for $2 billion in 2007.

Crane serves as chairman of the board for the new company, which is based in Houston, Texas. With this added venture, Crane now has over 50 offices in 16 countries. Primary industry sectors served include oil, aerospace, technology, retail, and transportation. The total service footprint for all of Crane's companies includes all modes of transport, logistics, customs brokerage, and end to end supply chain engineering and management. The CFS group is a ground transportation services and logistics group that maintains a neutral profile in the transportation sector.

"A smart, well-financed startup like Crane Cartage (CFS) gets to build its operations with the very best options from the outset. We're very proud they've chosen Aljex," said Aljex President Tom Heine.
